THE RAIL SPLITTER
~~Chicago - Garfield Park~~

A youthful Lincoln, of the railsplitting days, is depicted by C. J. Mulligan in his statue which stands in the South east corner of Garfield Park Near Madison Street, in Chicago. It was purchased by West Park Commissioners from the sculptor at a cost of $2,500.

The figure is standing, an ax is gripped in the right hand, and the left hand rests on the leg of the boy. Lincoln is hatless and the roughness of his pioneer clothes are in evidence. A portion of a log is near him.

"THE RAIL SPLITTER"—Designed by George Mulligan and cast by Jules Berchem, this memorial in Garfield park was dedicated in 1911. Like the many other Abraham Lincoln statues over the country, it will be of particular interest on Wednesday.

I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true; I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live by the light that I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right; stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goes wrong.

Honest, Abe!

This frigid weather apparently is too much even for Abraham Lincoln, standing in Garfield Park. This morning, he mysteriously was wearing a fur cap and muffler.

Another Chicago memorial that attracts visitors' attention is one in Garfield Park, by Charles J. Mulligan, called "The Rail Splitter," erected in 1911. It is one of the few figures which shows the President as a youth. One at the Stock Yards was purchased largely from funds given by school children.

THE RAIL SPLITTER

THIS statue, standing in Garfield park, near Washington and Central Park boulevards, depicts Abraham Lincoln in his earlier days at New Salem, Ill. At this period of his life, when he split rails and did other homely chores around the village, Lincoln was described as "a tall, gawky looking fellow." This statue was the work of the Chicago sculptor, Charles J. Mulligan. It was presented to the city by the former west park commissioners and was unveiled in 1911.

(This is one of a series of pictures and descriptions of statues and monuments to be found in Chicago's public parks.)

Heroic soul, in homely garb half hid,
 Sincere, sagacious, melancholy, quaint;
 What he endured, no less than what he did,
 Has reared his monument and crowned him saint. J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

A man of great ability, pure patriotism, unselfish nature, full of forgiveness for his enemies. GENERAL GRANT.

Under the providence of God, he was,
 next to Washington, the greatest instrument for the preservation of the Union and the integrity of our country. PETER COOPER.

Kind, unpretending, patient, laborious, brave, wise, great, and good, such was Abraham Lincoln.
